

Vocational Education and Training (VET)

Why do a VET course?

Many students should strongly consider including a vocational course in their study package. It can broaden their career outlook and provide for development in a range of skills relevant not just to one career area but to future employment in general.

VET is a term used to describe education and training arrangements designed to prepare people for work or to improve the knowledge and skills of people who are already working.

As a nationally accredited Registered Training Organisation (RTO) the College is able to structure work-based training, which has been approved at a national level.

UCSSC Lake Ginninderra delivers the following vocational courses:

- Business Administration
- Outdoor Education
- Automotive Technology
- Tourism and Event Management
- Furniture Construction
- Hospitality
- Metal Engineering
- Sport Recreation and Leadership